

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody, without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without your or your physician's knowledge of what it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

"I have frequently prescribed Castoria for common ailments of children with good results."
W. A. CRANDALL, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what stuff is put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use in proper cases. I judge it to be a very useful, as well as harmless family medicine."
W. J. McQuinn, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

Mascoto Murder Leaves Three Little Children Parentless

When Circuit Judge W. J. Robinson last Saturday pronounced the words that sent Manuel Fernandez Mascoto to prison for life, three little children were left fatherless and motherless, and with the ineradicable remembrance of a mother killed before their eyes.

It was been nearly a year since the peaceful little valley around the Kulihi-uka schoolhouse was suddenly startled by Mascoto's murder of his wife, the schoolteacher. After months of hospital treatment, the man, unsuccessful in his attempt to end his own life but terribly mutilated by the gunshot in his face, came forth to face the law, and he has been sent to prison for not less than 20 years.

His three children, any other relatives, live in mortal fear that "papa" will come back to shoot them as he shot their mother one sunny morning in the schoolyard. They are now being cared for by a grandmother and an aunt. The two girls, nine and eight, are with the aunt, Mrs. William Larsen. The boy, two, is with his grandmother—the mother of the mother who was taken from him.

Children Cared for.
Although kind relatives are caring for the children, they are hoping that one of the Portuguese societies will come to their aid. So far nothing of this kind has materialized, they say.

Why did Mascoto kill his wife? Why did he return from his labor downtown, come into the yard of the schoolhouse where his wife was beginning the day's work with her young charges, seize a shotgun from their own home in the rear of the schoolyard and shoot down the mother of his children?

These questions were never fully answered. Various motives were ascribed for the deed. It was such a deed as set the entire neighborhood talking, for seven school children also were wounded by the flying pellets.

Mascoto's trial brought out nothing, for Mascoto pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and there was no evidence presented.

Full Story is Told.
Here, for the first time, is told the full story of the shooting and the events leading up to it, according to the sister of the murdered woman, Mrs. William Larsen, the sister, told the story this week to the Star-Bulletin.

"We—my sister's family—have been hoping the truth would be brought out, for we want to show what a cold-blooded deed Mascoto committed," she said. "The facts never have been told. But we want you to give them to the public."

Mrs. Larsen says that the shooting was the climax of a series of quarrels due to Mascoto's insistence that his wife pay his debts, which she refused to do.

"The quarrels had been going on for some time," says the sister. "Mascoto ran up bills and my sister would not pay them. He threatened her several times."

"On the day before the shooting he quarreled with her, trying to make her pay some money he owed, but she would not. She needed the money to take care of the little ones, and besides, when he worked, he got good wages. But he did not want to work—he wanted her to support him."

Quarreled Over Child.

"Another thing that led up to the shooting was the interference of his sister, who made trouble between them. His sister had a child going to school there, to my sister, and she wanted to transfer this child. My sister said no, that her principal would not like her to transfer the child then but at the end of the term it could be taken up."

"On the morning of the shooting, Mascoto got up early to go to his work. He had to pass his mother's house, and when she came out, she told him that my sister had refused to allow the child to be transferred. He was already angry because of his quarrels over money matters, and he went downtown and told some men that he was going to finish his wife. Then he returned to the schoolhouse. Children Saw Deed.

"He came there while school was beginning and began to quarrel with my sister and she went out into the yard to go to the house nearby and telephone for the police. I think she telephoned and then came out and met him again. He struck her and knocked her down and began to drag her around the yard. We think her neck was broken. The children tried to pull her away, crying, 'Mamma, don't let papa hurt you!'"

"When he ceased dragging her around the yard, she fell where he threw her and he went in and got the shotgun, came out and shot her, and then he shot himself."

Mrs. Larsen says that after Mascoto was put in the hospital under guard, his friends and relatives boasted that he would never be sent to jail. "I am not a believer in capital punishment," says Mrs. Larsen, "but this murder was absolutely deliberate and he should have been reduced from first to second degree murder."

Mrs. Larsen says that Mascoto is able to talk readily, that even the little boy understands him and that no pity should be wasted on him.

CLEANSER YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL

It becomes thick, wavy, lustrous and all dandruff disappears—Hair stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanser" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few moments you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed—advertisement.

He was telling her, "I didn't half try; was my first shot, too, and I hit the bull's-eye." "Oh, dear! What an awful thing! You see, you'll have to pay for the bull!" said she.

HAWAII HOCHI COMMENTS ON IWILEI RAIDS

The following editorial appeared in the Hawaii Hochi, issue of Thursday, in connection with the recent activity among the denizens of Iwilei:

"To make this city as pure as possible in a moral sense is greatly to be desired and a plan must be worked out to reach as far as possible in this direction as we would like to see every stigma of shame removed from the Paradise of the Pacific and would like to see this commercial vice swept away, as a protection of the morals of society in general.

"While this is the end we sincerely wish for, minute care is required in handling the question. Should this fact escape from the minds of those in charge of the work their good intention and endeavor will be as babbling water and the results will be worse than present or previous conditions. Judging the matter from this standpoint, while we appreciate the action of the immigration officials, we have fear of the inevitable result.

"Each effect has its origin and cause, whether the same be good or bad. We admit that the prevalence of commercialized vice owes its origin to the moral depravity and lack of conscience of a few and that society in general must assume the blame and responsibility. Were society healthier there would be no room for the existence of such vice. The mere existence of the vice is a proof of the unhealthy condition of the community. Such being the condition of affairs prior to the arrest of these unfortunate women and their male consorts, we feel that the proper method would be to abolish the cause. To disregard the roots of the vice and to cut the branches will be jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

"Why do not the authorities abolish the saloon first and this vice afterwards? Why do they not increase the police department to three or four times its present size? Why is there not more aid given in religious circles? With the abolition of this undesirable quarter we are afraid that the vice may be scattered throughout the entire city. Unless it is possible to rely, absolutely, upon the action of the police we feel very uneasy about the action taken in cleaning up this quarter. Suppose the police force does not prove efficient and trustworthy we fear that there may be danger in unescorted women being abroad after nightfall. Take for example the tragedy of Hiral in the quarter.

"From a review of the foregoing, while we are perfectly agreed to the abolition of the vice we are opposed to the means employed. What would be most desired of the authorities is a thorough preparedness before taking drastic action."

Shirts that fit well afford the maximum amount of comfort and are pleasing to the eye. We are selling shirts of this character for a dollar and a half though they have a two-dollar value.
